PERSONAL SECURITY IN THE SOUTH. -A serious and injurious error has long been rooted in the Northern mind. It is the belief that a Northern man's person and property are unsafe in the Southern country. The delusion is so fast and deep set as to seem ineradicable. Yet a little reflection ought to teach the dullest mind that the impression is wholly without truth or foundation.

Northern men are to be found by hundreds in our towns, and thousands in our cities .-They are in the South in every conceivable may be found from 8 a, m., to 6 p. m., daily: capacity-as officers of the internal revenue, as agents and sub-agents of the Freedmen's Bureau, as members of the boards of registration, as itinerant political missionaries, as teachers of freedmen's schools, as preachers of the Gospel and abolitionism, as explorers for minerals, as founders of manufactories, as purchasers of land, as merchants and merchants' clerks, as visitors or relatives of Northern men already here, as travellers on railroads, as officers of federal courts and national banks, and in many other capacities. They are here in relations agreeable to the people; they are here in performance of functions excessively disagreeable to the populace. And yet there are scarcely as many cases of violence and injury perpetrated in the whole South in any week, or month, or year, as are reported in the city of N Y alone; and none of the cases that sembles in texture and appearance. It is much The criminal records of no country of equal well as Peruvian, and it costs but two thirds population and extent with the South, show the price of that article. fewer infractions of the law, or of the order and decorum of society, than those of our Horses. -- Southey, in his History of the alongside of any manure he may apply.

Woolston's Amoniated Bone Phosphate. This of the Spanish regiments which had been quartered in Funen were cavalry, mounted on fine black longtailed Andalusian horses. It was impossible to bring off these horses—about 1100 in number—and Romano was not a man who could order them to be destroyed; he was fond of horses himself, and knew that every man was attached to his beast, which had carried him so far and so faithfully. Their bridles were therefore taken off and they were turned conflict ensued, in which, retaining the discipline they had learned, they charged each other in squadrons of ten or twelve together, then closely engaged, striking with their fore feet, and biting and tearing each other with the most ferocious rage, and tramping over those who were beaten down, till the whole shore, in the course of an hour, was strewn with the dead and disabled. Part of them had been set free on rising ground at a distance.-They no sooner heard the roar of battle, than they came thundering down over the intermediate hedges, and catching the contagious madness, plunged into the fight with equal fury .-Sublime as the scene was, it was too horrible to be long contemplated, and Romano, in mercy, gave orders to destroy them. But it was too dangerous to attempt this, and after the last boat had quitted the beach, the few horses that remained were still engaged in the dreadful work of mutual destruction.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN .- A correspondent of the New York Times gives an account of concharacter of the late President Lincoln thus

"I asked him if he had known Lincoln. and he said, 'Yes, very well; we were in Congress together, and Lincoln was one of the Seven Young Indians.' To my query who they were, he said they were seven members of Congress, consiting of Stephens and Lincoln, together with Toombs of Georgia, Flournoy, Pendleton and Preston of Virginia, and Cabell of Florida, who, in 1847, banded together for the purpose of making Gen. Taylor President, and who received the name of the Seven Young Indians from their alertness and adroitness in political skirmish work. 'Our people during the war,' said he, 'had a wonderfully erroneous notion of Lincoln's intellectual ability. To be sure, he had very little idea of the nature of the Federal Government; but he was a wise man, and knew the heart of the people well-a trait in which he resembled Andrew Jackson. He taught in fables, like Æsop; and in Congress his speeches were mainly a string of anecdotes -an anecdote and then a point. He invented most of them; but they were generally extremely apt, and a full collection of them would be one of the most interesting of books.' "

the history of three prominent Englishmen: "Some forty years ago, at a dinner party given in this city by the late Harrison G. Otis, three young English gentlemen, then making a tour in this country, were present. They had completed their studies, and before entering upon public duties they took a trip to the United States, to study the institutions and habits of a new people, who had at that time scarcely given promise of the greatness they were to reach within less than half a century. The three gentlemen were nearly of the same age, and neither their host or themselves probably entertained an idea of the very prominent position each of the three was ultimately destined to attain. It is a little remarkable that the gentlemen are still living. This trio was composed of the Hon. Mr. Stanley (the present Earl Derby), Henry Labouchere, an ex-Minister of State, and John Evelyn Denison, who occupied a seat in Parliament for over thirty years, and in 1857 was chosen Speaker of the House of Commons. England's greatness, politically, has been maintained by retention in public office of men of distinguished ability and promotion to high honors of her most capable sons.'
